Established in 1957, the Montana Legislative Council was originally created as a permanent agency of the legislative branch of state government designed to study selected problems confronting the legislature in the interim between biennial sessions and to perform other services that facilitate the legislative process.

Chapter 431, Session Laws of 1973, substantially restructured the Council. The responsibility for conducting interim studies was transferred from the Council to legislative standing committees or their subcommittees. Particular areas to be studied in an interim, previously determined by the Council, became a responsibility of the new Committee on Priorities. The Committee on Priorities consists of sixteen bipartisan members - eight from the House Rules Committee and eight from the Senate Rules Committee.

Sections 43-709 through 43-731 and 12-501 through 12-510, R.C.M. 1947, provide the statutory authority for the structure and functions of the Council and interim committees. For purposes of discussion, the content of these sections may be divided into four areas; first, the powers and duties of the Council; second, the structure and responsibilities of the Council staff; third, interim committee organization and procedures; and fourth, the operation of the legislative intern program.

The Council

The Legislative Council consists of eight members; four members are chosen from the House, and four members are chosen from the Senate. Both political parties are equally represented on the Council. Each new Council must be chosen by the Speaker of the house and the Senate Committee on Committees before the fiftieth day of the first regular session of the biennium, and members serve for the biennium.

The law charges the Council with administrative responsibilities relative to the Council staff. An important new responsibility of the Council beginning in 1975 is supervision of the recodification of Montana's statutes by a Code Commissioner assigned to the Council staff. This task is scheduled for completion by January 1, 1979.

The one non-administrative policy study function assigned to the Council provides a legislative safety valve. The Council may, in the event a problem demanding legislative attention arises during the interim, assign study of the problem to an existing joint interim subcommittee.

The Council may not approve or disapprove substantive portions or recommendations of any interim committee report. Previously, the Council was responsible for approving all interim studies and recommendations.

The Council Staff

The staff of the Legislative Council acts as an independent, nonpolitical, impartial staff agency for the legislature, performing those duties and functions assigned by law or as directed or requested by members and committees of the legislature. The Council staff also provides certain information to the public on legislative matters.

The staff is divided into four functional divisions: Legislative Services Division, Research and Reference Services Division, Legal Services Division, and Management and Business Services Division.

The Legislative Services Division is responsible for clerical preparation of introduced bills, for engrossing and enrolling of bills, and for printing and mailing of the bills. This division uses a computerized bill drafting system in order to operate with a high degree of effectiveness and accuracy with a relatively small staff of typists and proofreaders and is also responsible for publication of the legislative journals, of a numerical compilation of code sections affected by the session laws, and the final session laws.

The Research and Reference Services Division and the Legal Services Division have many of the same responsibilities. Both divisions perform general and specialized research and reference and information functions. Staff members from both divisions assist in the preparation of the Legislative Review, staff legislative committees during the session and throughout the interim, draft legislation, prepare legislative and staff reports, and provide information on the legislative process to the public.

The Research and Reference Services Division is primarily responsible for all interim studies conducted by legislative interim committees and all staff reports are reviewed by the director of this division.

The Legal Services Division furnishes legal counsel to the legislature and is primarily responsible for the recodification and revision of the laws. The director of this division is also the Code Commissioner who will supervise the recodification and after publication of the new code in 1979, will direct the continuing codification, indexing, rearranging and general updating of the new code.

The Management and Business Services Division maintains all bookkeeping records; signs all legislative claims and payrolls; requisitions all printing, supplies, and equipment; and serves the House and Senate during a session.

Legislative Interim Operations

Sections 43-716 through 43-719, R.C.M. 1947, provide the boundaries within which the legislature must act during an interim. The legislative Committee on Priorities directs the legislature's interim studies. This committee considers all resolutions, bills, and letters from standing committees or individual legislators requesting studies and selects those to be given interim consideration. No committee may act on any routine study or measure in the interim unless it was assigned by the Committee on Priorities.

There are three types of committees that function during an interim: full standing committees, interim subcommittees, and select committees. An interim subcommittee is appointed from a regular standing committee. Four members, two from each party, are appointed by the chairman of each standing committee to serve with four selected from the respective committee of the other house. Two or more standing committees may appoint members to one joint interim subcommittee assigned to study issues of common concern if so directed by the Committee on Priorities. These subcommittees do the majority of the interim work. Each subcommittee must report its findings and recommendations to the legislature at the beginning of the next succeeding session.

A "select committee" is formed to examine a particular issue or bill. This committee is responsible to the house from which it was selected. It operates in a fashion similar to the interim subcommittees except that it may operate during a session. A select committee reports to the legislature upon completion of its study.

The full standing committees are also authorized to function during the interim. However, due to the expense involved in holding meetings, these committees meet infrequently.

Legislative Intern Program

The Legislative Council also administers the Legislative Intern Program, established by law in 1974. This program provides an opportunity for qualified Montana college and university students to gain first-hand experience of the legislative process. Each unit of the Montana University System may select at least one intern, and five additional interns may be chosen from applications submitted to the Council. The Council assigns each intern to a legislator, and the intern is directly responsible to that legislator.
